Suggested Readings and Resources

Atwood KC. Of SBM and EBM redux, part II: is it a good idea to test highly implausible health claims? Science-Based Medicine. December 10, 2010.

Catalano E. Student comment: healing or homicide?: when parents refuse medical treatment for their children on religious grounds. Buffalo Women’s Law J. 2010;18:158.

Dent v West Virginia, 129 US 114, 117 (1889).

Hammerstrom KT, Bjorndal A. If there are no randomized controlled trials, is the implication always that we need more research? Cochrane Library. http://www.thecochranelibrary.com/details/editorial/1034087/If-there-are-no-randomised-controlled-trials-do-we-always-need-more-research.html. Accessed April 1, 2011.

Hyman R. How not to test mediums: critiquing the afterlife experiments. Skeptical Inquirer. 2003; 27(1).

McAndrews GP. Keynote address presented at ACC-RAC; March 2008; Las Vegas, NV.

Minn Stat sec 145A.025, sec 609.378.

Minn Stat sec 260C.007.

Minn Stat sec 626.556.

NY Family Ct Act sec 1012.

People v Amber, 349 NYS2d 604 (1973).

Smith v People, 117 P 612 (Colo 1911).

State v Hinze, 441 NW2d 593 (Neb 1989).

Stetina v State, 513 NE2d 1234 (Ind Ct App 1987).

Wilk v American Medical Ass’n, 895 F2d 352 (7th Cir), 111 S Ct 513 (1990).

Copyright 2011 American Medical Association. All rights reserved.