

AMA Journal of Ethics®

April 2021, Volume 23, Number 4: E369-370

CME MODULE

What Can Clinicians Learn From Caregiving and Research in Ghettos and Camps of Nazi-Occupied Europe?

Tessa Chelouche, MD and Matthew K. Wynia, MD, MPH

This course will focus on the clinician teachers and researchers in the Warsaw Ghetto. We will delve into how their resilience and research influences health care workers today.

To claim one AMA PRA Category 1 Credit™ for the CME activity associated with this article, you must do the following: (1) read this article in its entirety, (2) answer at least 80 percent of the quiz questions correctly, and (3) complete an evaluation. The quiz, evaluation, and form for claiming AMA PRA Category 1 Credit™ are available through the AMA Ed Hub™.

Tessa Chelouche, MD is a family physician in Israel, where she also serves as co-chair of the Department of Bioethics and the Holocaust of the UNESCO Chair of Bioethics, Haifa. She is codirector of the Maimonides Institute for Medicine, Ethics and the Holocaust and has been a lecturer for a preclinical course on medicine and the Holocaust as a member of the Rappaport Faculty of Medicine at the Technion Institute for the past 20 years. She coauthored the Casebook on Bioethics and the Holocaust (UNESCO Chair in Bioethics, 2013) and has published articles and presented at numerous national and international conferences on topics involving medicine, ethics, and the Holocaust.

Matthew K. Wynia, MD, MPH is a professor of medicine and public health at the University of Colorado School of Medicine in Aurora and the director of the University of Colorado's Center for Bioethics and Humanities, located on the Anschutz Medical Campus.

Citation

AMA J Ethics. 2021;23(4):E369-370.

DOI

10.1001/amajethics.2021.369.

Conflict of Interest Disclosure

The author(s) had no conflicts of interest to disclose.

The viewpoints expressed in this article are those of the author(s) and do not necessarily reflect the views and policies of the AMA.